INTRODUCTION

The objective of this bibliography is to provide the researcher with a comprehensive guide to the South African Jewish experience, as reflected in writings by and about South African Jews and Judaism.

Historical background
Although baptized Jews were included amongst the colonists of the Dutch East India Company, who arrived at the Cape in 1652, it was not until the introduction of freedom of religion in 1803 when the Colony came under the Batavian Republic and subsequently under the British occupation in 1806, that we hear of practising Jews in the Cape Colony. The immigration of settlers from Great Britain in 1820, which included Jews, increased their number, so that in 1841, the first synagogue service was held in Cape Town, symbolizing the emergence of the Jewish community as an identifiable entity.

The present day community grew out of the waves of immigrants who were attracted to the discovery of diamonds near Kimberley in 1867, and of gold in the Transvaal in 1886. These new immigrants included English and German Jews, like Barney Barnato, Alfred Beit, David Harris, and Sammy Marks, who played a prominent role in the early mining days. In the eighties and nineties this immigration was swelled by Russian, Polish and Lithuanian Jews, fleeing the pogroms in Eastern Europe. These immigrants enriched the community with Hebrew and Yiddish culture and Jewish nationalism.

Although an apostate Jew, Joseph Suasso de Lima, was one of the earliest historians of the Cape Colony. The first chronicle by a South African Jew, is that of the explorer Nathaniel Isaacs, Travels and adventures in Eastern Africa, with a sketch of Natal (1836). The Anglo-Boer War, 1899-1901, also provides us with various chronicles by Jews who participated in the battles.

The part played by Jews is evident in the history and development of the Cape Colony, the Transvaal and Orange River Republics, and Natal, in their merger into the Union of South Africa (1910) and into a Republic (1962).

Inner life
The inner life of the immigrants, is reflected in the memories of their former homes in Eastern Europe, and in the experiences of the victims of the Holocaust in Nazi Germany.

The bibliography traces the creation of the infrastructure of Jewish community life in the synagogues, the South African Jewish Board of Deputies with its myriad of welfare organisations, and the network of Jewish afternoon and Day Schools. Finally Zionism must be regarded as the formative element and inspiration for the strength and cohesiveness of Jewish identity in South Africa. The activities of the Zionist Movement in South Africa, and the contribution of South Africans, who have made aliyah, to the State of Israel, both receive attention.

Demography, social attitudes of Jews and towards Jews, Jewish interrelationships with other language and racial groups, as well as South Africa's relations with the State of Israel are all recorded. The considerable contribution of South African Jews to politics, economics, the law, science, literature, fine art, theatre, music, opera, dance and sport is extensively documented.

Literature
The quality of South African Jewish life is reflected in the fiction, drama, poetry, and humour in English, Afrikaans, Yiddish, and Hebrew.

English literature
Jewish South Africans are included amongst South Africa's foremost writers of fiction. However Sarah Gertrude Millin, the pioneer of South African fiction in the 1920's, and the 1991 Nobel prize winner, Nadine Gordimer, hardly touch on the Jewish experience in South Africa, although Jewishness is evident in some of Gordimer's early stories, The Defeated and A Watcher by the Dead, and in her first novel, The Lying Days. The South African Jewish authors do not differ from their non-Jewish counterparts, focusing predominantly on South Africa's painful racial problems.

Lionel Abrahams (1984) ranks Dan Jacobson and Jillian Becker, both non-resident South Africans, along with Gordimer, amongst South Africa's leading exponents of fiction. Jewish themes are more prevalent in Jacobson's work. His novel, The Beginners (1966), the most important book on a Jewish theme, encapsulates several decades in the life of a South African Jewish family. Other authors revealing varying degrees of Jewishness in their writings include amongst others, Lionel Abrahams, Victor Barwin, Shirley Eskapa, Bertha Goudvis, Annette Joelson, Arthur Markowitz, Rose Moss, Albert Segal, and Rose Zwi.

Ruth Miller and Sydney Clouts rank amongst the leading South African poets, but their Jewishness is not reflected in their poetry. Jewish themes appear occasionally in most of the works of other Jewish poets.

Afrikaans literature
Although two baptized Dutch Jews, the brothers Jan and Frans Cachet, were among the fathers of Afrikaans literature, Jews have made little contribution to Afrikaans. The exceptions are the poets, Sarah Goldblatt, the literary secretary of the great Afrikaans writer, Senator J. Langenhoven; Olga Kirsch, who produced a number of volumes of poetry before her emigration to Israel; and the immigrant poet, Peter Blum. Moses Romm translated the daily prayerbook into Afrikaans (1951) and Roman B. Egert translated the Haggadah (1968).

Yiddish literature

Hebrew literature
The quantity of Hebrew literature produced by South Africans is extremely limited and South Africans have not generally made a lasting contribution to Hebrew literature. The exception is Rabbi J.L. Landau who immigrated to the Transvaal in 1903. Although his major contribution of five Hebrew plays, and a book of poems, were written in Galicia, his country of birth, he continued to publish Hebrew plays, poems and a biographical work in South Africa, and is acknowledged as one of the fathers of the modern Hebrew drama.
His Short lectures on modern Hebrew literature from M. H. Luzzatto to S. D. Luzzatto (Johannesburg, 1923), is cited by modern historians of Hebrew literature.

Scope

The bibliography draws on a wide base of information. Four existing Jewish bibliographies were used as source material. These are:

1. Poliva, J.A. [1961]. A short history of the Jewish Press and literature of South Africa from its earliest days until the present time. Vereeniging, Transvaal: [s.n.].

For the first time in South African Jewish bibliography, references to book reviews are included in its scope. Because of its size, the bibliography has not been annotated, except for the occasional brief comment. Periodical and serial publications are not included. The bibliography includes an author and subject index.

Arrangement

The bibliography is divided into two sections: I. South African Jewry, which covers the history and description of South African Jewry as an ethnic group in a multi-racial and multi-cultural society. II. Literature by South Africans of Jewish origin, which includes fiction, poetry, drama, humour and essays by South African Jewish writers.

An innovation in the arrangement of this bibliography is the incorporation of biography within the subject divisions. Thus, for example, a biography of a communal leader will be included in the section on Communal organisation and the biography of a musician will be found in the section on Music, opera and dance. Where a person is involved in more than one sphere of activity, the author and subject index can always be consulted.

When a book has appeared in a number of editions, in most cases, only one edition is listed. The duplication of records has been avoided where possible. When a record is repeated, only the first entry is numbered, the second entry is marked with an asterisk.

Bibliographic style

As the bibliography incorporates citations from different bibliographic sources, bibliographic completeness and style may vary. Where possible an attempt has been made to standardize entries according to Anglo-
American Cataloguing Rules. Transliteration also varies with the origin of the records. It follows either the system of the Encyclopaedia Judaica (1972) or that of the Library of Congress, unless the record has been copied and the actual book was not examined. The location and spelling of the towns and villages in Lithuania, Latvia and Poland were standardized according to the Encyclopaedia Judaica (1972) and according to Schoenburg and Schoenburg’s Lithuanian Jewish communities (1991).

Personal names of authors, editors or translators are listed with initials only. However where a person is the subject of an entry, first names are also provided. For this reason names in the index may appear twice, with initials only for author entries, and again with first names for subject entries. Where the person is both author and subject, as in the case of an autobiography, the name will only be listed once as a subject entry to avoid unnecessary duplication.

Definition of a South African Jew
The definition of a Jew includes being born of a Jewish mother, or of having been converted to Judaism. The definition of a South African has been allowed a wide interpretation. It includes the many South Africans such as the novelist, Dan Jacobson, educated in South Africa but no longer resident.

Acknowledgements
I would like to thank U.C.T. Libraries for supporting me in this project. I must particularly thank Margaret Richards and her staff in the African Studies Library, Leonie Twentyman Jones and her staff in Manuscripts and Archives, and Laureen Rushby and her staff in Government Publications. David de la Croes in the Library Computerisation Department provided the Jewish Studies Library with a data base program without which this project could not have been undertaken.

I must also thank the former Director of the Kaplan Centre, Prof. Allie Dubb, and the present Director, Prof. Milton Shain, for their constant encouragement and assistance. I also extend thanks to Yvonne Verblun and her staff at the Gitlin Library, Sylvia Tubak at the Library of the South African Jewish Board of Deputies in Johannesburg. In addition I must thank Marge Clouts, Prof. Marcia Leveson of the University of the Witwatersrand and Gus Ferguson of Snailpress, for help with Jewish South African fiction and poetry, and Prof. Shula Marks of the School for Oriental and African Studies of London University for her help with the memoirs of the Jews involved in the struggle against the Apartheid government. Finally I must thank Sara Amato for her help with the proofreading of the manuscript, and my children, Galia, Noa and Ayal for their support and encouragement. Galia saved the day with the formatting of the document, and Ayal, designed the cover.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SOUTH AFRICAN JEWRY

Veronica Belling has been the librarian of the Jewish Studies Collection at the University of Cape Town since its inception in June 1981, before which she worked at the Gitlin Library of the Western Province Zionist Council. She has a B.A. from the University of Cape Town, a Post-Graduate Diploma in Librarianship from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and a B.A. Hons. Judaica from the University of South Africa.

This bibliography developed as a response to reference queries received over the years by researchers in the field of South African Jewry. It incorporates four earlier bibliographies by Poliva, Beinash, Stein and Musiker, which have been updated with the help of the South African Bibliographic Network, and articles indexed chiefly from the South African Jewish periodical, Jewish Affairs. It includes over 2,200 records of books, articles and dissertations, in English, Afrikaans, Yiddish and Hebrew. The bibliography is divided into two sections: I. South African Jewry, which covers the history and description of South African Jewry as an ethnic group in a multi-racial and multi-cultural society. II. Literature by South Africans of Jewish origin, which includes fiction, poetry, drama, humour and essays by South African Jewish writers.
